Tips to protect your home from water damage

KNOW where your main water valve is located so you can shut it off quickly in case of an emergency.

MONITOR your water bill. A bigger water bill may indicate you have a leak somewhere.

REPLACE the hoses on your washing machine, dishwasher and other appliances periodically. Consider replacing a rubber hose with a steel-braided one to increase durability and longevity.

TEST your sump pump at least once per year to make sure it's working when you need it most! If your pump doesn't have an alternate power source, add a battery backup or upgrade to a pump with a water-powered backup.

CLEAN your gutters and downspouts regularly to ensure water moves through them properly and drains away from your foundation.

INSPECT your water heater annually for signs of corrosion or leaks. Aging water heaters can weaken over time, increasing their likelihood of rupturing.

Water intrusion can impact even the most prepared homeowner, but don't fear – water detection technology is here to help!

WIRELESS LEAK SENSORS

connect to your wireless network and communicate with a central device or send a notification directly to your smartphone when they encounter moisture.

SMART WATER VALVES

are a great backup option and will automatically shut off the main water supply if an abnormal water flow is detected.
